No. 1 K-State Travels To Baylor

Kansas State Sports Information

Fresh off a 23-10 win at TCU that saw the Wildcat defense turn in one of its best performances of the season, Kansas State will wrap up a two-game road swing with a primetime matchup at Baylor on Saturday. The nationally-televisted contest between the 10-0 Wildcats and the 4-5 Bears is slated for a 7 p.m., kickoff on ESPN with Brad Nessler (play-by-play), Todd Blackledge (analyst) and Holly Rowe (sidelines) on the call. Wyatt Thompson will call the action for the K-State Sports Network with Stan Weber providing color analysis and Matt Walters on the sidelines.

A QUICK LOOK AT THE WILDCATS

The Wildcats are 10-0 overall and 7-0 in Big 12 play and can clinch a share of the Big 12 Championship and the league's automatic BCS bowl berth with their next win. K-State checked in at No. 1 in this week's BCS standings, the highest BCS ranking in school history. The Cats are averaging 214 yards per game on the ground on offense, are seventh nationally in passing efficiency, seventh in scoring offense and currently lead the nation in turnover margin at plus-20. K-State is also holding steady as the nation's least-penalized unit with 32 this year. Last week at TCU, the Wildcat defense held the Horned Frogs to just 10 points while collecting six sacks and forcing two turnovers. In fact, K-State has scored 114 points off turnovers this year while yielding just seven points to opponents via turnovers. Quarterback Collin Klein continues to lead the team to victory as he is 21-4 in his career as the starting quarterback, including a 15-3 mark in Big 12 play. With his next rushing touchdown, Klein will make history and become the first quarterback from a BCS AQ school to rush for 20 touchdowns and throw for 10 scores in multiple seasons. Helping Klein lead the charge offensively is John Hubert, who has scored 12 touchdowns in 10 games after three as the full-time starter a year ago. Hubert ranks second in the Big 12 at 78.3 yards per game, while Klein is fourth at 74.8 yards per game. The Wildcat defense has been tough all year, giving up just 17 points per game to rank 14th nationally, while K-State's rush defense is ninth in the NCAA, yielding just 98.9 yards per game. Senior linebacker Arthur Brown continues to put up All-America numbers as he leads the team with 69 tackles and has two interceptions.

A LOOK AT THE OPPONENT: BAYLOR

K-State will travel to Waco, Texas, Saturday and face yet another dynamic offense as the Bears head into the game ranked second nationally in both passing offense and total offense and seventh in scoring offense. Quarterback Nick Florence leads the Big 12 in passing and total offense while wide receiver Terrance Williams is one of the best wideouts in the country. Florence is averaging 394.8 total yards per game, while Williams has 77 catches for 1,431 yards this season. At running back, as many as three Bears could see time as Jared Salubi, Glasco Martin and Lache Seastrunk have all provided significant carries this season for head coach Art Briles. On defense, Bryce Hager leads the league in tackles with 89 while Joe Williams' 11 passes defended rank third in the Big 12.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

Following Kansas State's 23-10 win at TCU, the Wildcats moved to 10-0 on the year and are one win away from clinching the at least a share of the Big 12 title as well as the league's automatic berth in a BCS bowl. K-State checked in at No. 1 in this week's BCS rankings for the first time in school history while also grabbing a No. 1 ranking in any poll for the first time since 1998. The 1998 squad went 11-0 before falling to Texas A&M in the Big 12 Championship game.

CLOSING STRONG

The Wildcats are looking to have a November to remember, and under head coach Bill Snyder, the Cats have a track record of successful stretch runs. Since 1991 under Snyder, K-State is 46-16 in the month of November, which includes a stretch of 14 seasons of winning records in the month (1991-2003, 2011) and six seasons with an undefeated final month.

SERIES NOTES, ETC.

Following last week's win at TCU, K-State has now won nine straight games against teams from the state of Texas, including seven straight against Big 12 teams from the Lone Star State. Against Baylor, K-State is 7-2 all-time in the series while the two teams have split the last four meetings. K-State's last win in Waco was back in 2002 as the Cats will look to snap a two-game skid in the series on the road.

THE 150 CLUB

Head coach Bill Snyder picked up the 150th victory of his career in last year's season opener, joining Frank Beamer (Virginia Tech), Steve Spurrier (South Carolina), Mack Brown (Texas) and Gary Pinkel (Missouri) as active coaches with 150 wins at BCS schools. After guiding K-State from 1989 to 2005, and again over the last three-plus seasons, the 2012 national coach of the year candidate is also one of the longest-tenured active coaches in the FBS, ranking fourth among behind Nevada's Chris Ault (28th), Beamer (26th) and Troy's Larry Blakeney (22nd). Even more impressive is that Snyder is the lone BCS coach who has served at the same school for at least 20 years and has never held the same position at another school. Snyder currently ranks fourth among all active FBS coaches with 168 wins since 1990, while he is currently ranked ninth in overall wins.

KEEP OUT

Kansas State's defense has done a masterful job of keeping its opponent out of the endzone through the first 10 weeks of the season. The Wildcats had a string of seven straight quarters of not allowing a touchdown until Miami scored late in K-State's 52-13 win. In fact, Miami's touchdown came with 3:51 left in the game on a 17-yard drive and was setup by a 77-yard kick-off return. The last time that a Wildcat defense opened a season with at least seven straight quarters of not allowing a touchdown was back in 2002. The 2002 squad opened the year with eight straight quarters of no touchdowns. Also, in its win over Oklahoma, K-State held the Sooners to just 19 points which were the third-fewest points scored by a Stoops-led team, while the defense held TCU to its lowest scoring output at home under Gary Patterson (13 points). So far this season, K-State's defense has not allowed an offensive score in 21 of 40 quarters, while it has held nine of 10 opponents to 24 points or less. In fact, of this week's top 15 scoring defenses, only K-State, Alabama, Florida, LSU and Notre Dame have held each opponent this year to 30 points or less.

City Council Looks At Social Services

By Ashley Wells
Manhattan Free Press

Created in 1988, The Social Security Advisory Board (SSAB) was designed to aid the City Commission in evaluating the social service needs of the city's communities and to recommend which social service agencies to fund.

Throughout the year, SSAB evaluates what the social service needs of the city are and how the City's funds are being sent. By May, 31st, SSAB's recommendations are to be submitted into the City Commission for consideration, which will take place during the annual budget process. Due to the fact that SSAB is only an advice board, the Commission may deviate from the recommendations.

The Social Service Advisory Board's 2013 funding recommendations totaled to $373,600 for ten social service agencies. On July 10th of this year, the City Commission directed an across-the-board five percent reduction for the allocated agencies (the reduction was approved on August 21st).

Misinterpreting the Commissions intentions, SSAB believed they were directed to allocate the reduction to best fit the social service needs of the community. Instead of the across-the board reduction, the Social Security Advisory board decided to eliminate the funds for the UFM Community Learning Center (voted for on September 5th). The amount of money eliminated from this cut is $3,000. Any other remaining reductions were taken from the other nine agencies.

The UFM Community Learning Center is a non-profit organization created by students attending Kansas State and Kansas State faculty members in 1968. UFM was created to close the gap between the community and the university. There are several credited and non-credited classes that are available to the community through this program.

Since the SSAB is only advisory, it does not have the authority to redirect funding; therefore the City Commission must approve the decisions. The discussion will take place at the next meeting on November 13th. The approval of the allocations will occur if a majority of the Commission agrees with SSAB. All allocations for 2013 will be funded through the General Fund.

Audit: Juvenil Center Denies Ed Program

By Travis Perry
Kansas Watchdog

TOPEKA — Female juvenile offenders are being denied the same educational opportunities as their male counterparts at the Kansas Juvenile Correctional Complex.

This gender inequality was cited in an audit presented Wednesday by researchers from the Legislative Division of Post Audit, which blasted KJCC and Juvenile Justice Authority officials for the lack of opportunities at the Topeka facility.

"The programs don't necessarily need to be the same, but they need to be equal," researcher Laurel Murdie said to members of the Legislative Post Audit Committee.

Females have made up a small portion of KJCC's inmate population, since the state closed the Beloit Juvenile Correctional Facility for female inmates in 2009.

LPA researchers said while course work and classes are balanced between genders through the facility's high school curriculum, the same cannot be said about post-secondary, technical and work-study offerings at KJCC.

KJCC's 20 female offenders only have access to two technical and three work-study programs, compared with the seven technical and eight work-study programs offered to the 220 male offenders, according to the audit.

And while post-secondary classes haven't been offered since 2010, they've never been made available to female offenders at KJCC.

Additionally, the audit criticized KJCC for limiting female offenders' access to physical education classes, highlighting that while male inmates were allowed to use one of the facility's two gymnasiums, females were forced to hold physical education classes in an unoccupied living unit within the building.

Acting JJA Commissioner Terri Williams said a large reason for the inequity was because of KJCC's limited facilities and its need to keep male and female offenders separate at all times. Williams stepped into the role earlier this year after Gov. Sam Brownback fired former JJA Commissioner Curtis Whitten in March.

State Sen. Kelly Kultala, D-Kansas City, commissioned the initial audit after a troubling tour of KJCC last year, during which she was made aware of inappropriate remarks Whitten made to female offenders.

"He called them his 'little babies' and his 'little angels,' and they were to call him 'papa,'" Kultala said in a previous interview.

But Williams said she didn't think sexism was the root problem behind the inequities.

"Certainly we've got some challenges with having closed Beloit, which used to be its own facility, and moving the females to Topeka," Williams said. "You've just got to do that in a thoughtful way and be constantly reevaluating your systems and what you offer, and that's what I'm hoping we're doing."

The most recent issues brought to light are just some of the many challenges facing Williams.

"I have felt like since I've been here I've been in crisis management mode, and that's not a good place to be, it's not a place I like to be," Williams said. "I like to be more playful and methodical in my approach to agency issues, so that's been a challenge. But I do feel like incrementally we're getting to where we're doing less of the reactive, putting out fires, and a little bit more of taking a step back and being a bit more playful."

State Mails KanCare Material

TOPEKA, Kan. -The first bundle of KanCare member pre-enrollment packets are being mailed today, Nov. 10, and mailings will continue through the end of November. With more than 380,000 Kansans receiving Medicaid services, the Kansas Department of Health and Environment (KDHE) and the Kansas Department for Aging and Disability Services (KDADS) are planning another educational tour to meet with consumers about their transition to KanCare, this time with representatives from the three health plans.

Lieutenant Governor Jeff Colyer, M.D., said this is a significant milestone on the time line for KanCare readiness activities. "Improving care for our most vulnerable citizens remains the central focus of all the hard work by state staff and other stakeholders who remain committed to making this new system a reality. We look forward to giving Kansas consumers a choice for how they receive their health care and to delivering it in a way that improves health outcomes," said Colyer.

Educational meetings will take place in 12 cities across Kansas Nov. 26-29 to assist members in choosing their KanCare health plan. The initial assignment of each member to one of three health plans—Amerigroup, Sunflower State Health Plan and United Healthcare—was generated from a computer algorithm taking into account each member's current primary provider and the health plans' provider networks whenever possible.

"Achieving continuity of care for our patients is the goal for running the program for initial assignments. If members like the health plan that has been assigned to them and do not want to change to either one of the other plans, they are set for the new program; they only need to start using the new medical card on January 1," said Robert Moser, M.D.,

KDHE Secretary and State Health Officer.

Members will have another 90 days starting Jan. 1, 2013, to choose a new plan if that's their decision. This choice period is in addition to the amount of time members have between when they receive their pre-enrollment packets in November and the end of 2012.

The Nov. 26-29 educational tour will be the third round of educational tours for members this year hosted jointly by KDHE and KDADS, and the fourth overall. The dates and cities for this round of "open enrollment" meetings are listed below, while the full schedule with times and locations are enclosed:

- Consumer Meetings:
- Nov. 26 in Manhattan, Topeka and Dodge City
 - Nov. 27 in Garden City, Independence and Olathe
 - Nov. 28 in Hays, Wichita and Kansas City
 - Nov. 29 in Salina, El Dorado and Emporia

Anyone with a disability may request accommodation for these meetings, such as Braille or an interpreter, in order to participate; however, transportation is not provided. Requests for this accommodation should be made at least two working days in advance of the meeting by contacting KanCare@kdheks.gov or by calling Rita Haverkamp at (785) 296-5107.

"The three health plans offered will cover the same services members have had in the past - plus new services such as heart and lung transplants, preventative dental services for adults and weight-loss services," said KDADS Secretary Shawn Sullivan. "The value-added services provided by one or more health plans include rewards programs for healthy behavior and career development services for people with disabilities, all at no cost to the state."

ObamaCare Is Still Vulnerable

By Michael F. Cannon
CATO Institute

President Obama has won reelection, and his administration has asked state officials to decide by Friday, November 16, whether their state will create one of Obamacare's health-insurance "exchanges." States also have to decide whether to implement the law's massive expansion of Medicaid. The correct answer to both questions remains a resounding no.

State-created exchanges mean higher taxes, fewer jobs, and less protection of religious freedom. States are better off defaulting to a federal exchange. The Medicaid expansion is likewise too costly and risky a proposition. Republican Governors Association chairman Bob McDonnell (R., Va.) agrees, and has announced that Virginia will implement neither provision.

There are many arguments against creating exchanges.

First, states are under no obligation to create one.

Second, operating an Obamacare exchange would be illegal in 14 states. Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Ohio, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Utah, and Virginia have enacted either statutes or constitutional amendments (or both) forbidding state employees to participate in an essential exchange function: implementing Obamacare's individual and employer mandates.

Now is not the time to go wobbly. Obamacare is still harmful and still unpopular.

Third, each exchange would cost its state an estimated $10 million to $100 million per year, necessitating tax increases.

Fourth, the November 16 deadline is no more real than the "deadlines" for implementing REAL ID, which have been pushed back repeatedly since 2008.

Fifth, states can always create an exchange later if they choose.

Sixth, a state-created exchange is not a state-controlled exchange. All exchanges will be controlled by Washington.

Seventh, Congress authorized no funds for federal "fallback" exchanges. So Washington may not be able to impose Exchanges on states at all.

Eighth, the Obama administration has yet to provide crucial information that states need before they can make an informed decision.

Ninth, creating an exchange sets state officials up to take the blame when Obamacare increases insurance premiums and denies care to the sick. State officials won't want their names on this disastrous mess.

Tenth, creating an exchange would be assisting in the creation of a "public option" that would drive domestic health-insurance carriers out of business through unfair competition.

Eleventh, Obamacare remains unpopular. The latest Kaiser Family Foundation poll found that only 38 percent of the public supports it.

Twelfth, defaulting to a federal exchange exempts a state's employers from the employer mandate — a tax of $2,000 per worker per year (the tax applies to companies with more than 59 employees, but for such companies that tax applies after the 30th employee, not the 59th). If all states did so, that would exempt 18 million Americans from the individual mandate's tax of $2,085 per family of four. Avoiding those taxes improves a state's prospects for job creation, and protects the conscience rights of employers and individuals whom the Obama administration is forcing to purchase contraceptives coverage.

Finally, rejecting an exchange reduces the federal deficit. Obamacare offers its deficit-financed subsidies to private health insurers only through state-created exchanges. If all states declined, federal deficits would fall by roughly $700 billion over ten years.

For similar reasons, states should decline to implement Obamacare's Medicaid expansion. The Supreme Court gave states that option. All states should exercise it.

Medicaid is rife with waste and fraud. It increases the cost of private health care and insurance, crowds out private health insurance and long-term-care insurance, and discourages enrollees from climbing the economic ladder. There is scant reliable evidence that Medicaid improves health outcomes, and no evidence that it is a cost-effective way of doing so.

My colleague Jagadeesh Gokhale estimates that expanding Medicaid will cost individual states up to $53 billion over the first ten years. That's before an emboldened President Obama follows through on his threats to shift more Medicaid costs to states.

Neither the states nor the federal government have the money to expand Medicaid. If all states politely decline, federal deficits will shrink by another $900 billion.

Now is not the time to go wobbly. Obamacare is still harmful and still unpopular. The presidential election was hardly a referendum, as it pitted the first person to enact Obamacare against the second person to enact it. Since the election, many state officials are reaffirming their opposition to both implementing exchanges and expanding Medicaid.

If enough states do so, Congress will have no choice but to reopen Obamacare. With a GOP-controlled House, opponents will be in a much stronger position than they were when this harmful law was enacted.

Over Easy... by Bob Strawn

"Due to a production error, last week's column was not published in full. Here is the complete commentary."

Well, what have we learned from Tuesday night's election returns? What changed? And what can we expect going forward?

On the national scene, Republicans lost the presidency because their appeal was simply too restricted. Hispanics, ten percent of the electorate, went to Barack Obama by 7 to 3. Youngsters, those under age 30 - eighteen percent of voters - well, our rock star president owned 'em by 34 points.

And he continued to win with younger women, blacks, gays and union folks.

So, even though the country moved somewhat to right, it just wasn't enough.

A narrow 2% victory in the popular vote will actually be an Obama landslide in the Electoral College, an institution we've railed against in the past.

And Congress remains split. Stupid comments about rape by Republican Senate candidates in what were very winnable Missouri and Indiana ended with Democratic victories. The House of Representatives, however, remains with the minority party.

So, overall, not much has changed in our Capital. But we're not sure about the 'hope' thingy. President Obama and the country are left in his victory with all the problems he's had before. Terrorism. Obamacare implementation. We'll probably spend even more money on wind, solar and such. Underground energy will languish. Regulations will grow. And as the fiscal cliff approaches with sequestration, we'll have to see who jumps first.

Most importantly though, we hope those Republican-appointed Supreme Court justices remain good and healthy. The biggest worry here has always been the president's potential replacements. That would have a far more lasting negative impact for conservatives than his ongoing presidency.

Locally, the Chamber of Commerce won its $20 million sales tax renewal. And they did so by a blistering margin. Methinks folks looked around the community and saw prosperous times in spite of the national recession.

Downtown redevelopment, Civics Plus, American Airlines, even the cranes at Bill Snyder Family Stadium. The town and county just feel good. And a solid sales tax case was made around lowering property taxes, fixing roads and improving jobs. Voters took that all into consideration and said 'okay.' Kudos go to the Chamber and its supporters both in and out of government for a surprising tax-me-more victory.

Republicans Bob Boyd and Ron Wells will take seats on the Riley County Commission, joining Dave Lewis. Gone are Republican Al Johnson and Democrat Karen McCulloh. This should mean a step to the right - fiscal stewardship - as both newcomers campaigned as conservatives. We hope that's the case, as far too often, once elected, the conservative hawk morphs into an acquiescent butterfly.

Republican Tom Phillips did as expected by easily winning his seat in the Kansas House. Remember, Tom was appointed to the legislature after Susan Mosier resigned last year. No surprise. Tom is well-respected and will serve as long as he chooses.

He'll be joined by the Democratic Party's Sydney Carlin. Again, not shocking that Sydney romps. She loves her job. And the community loves her. No one enjoys the work more.

Tom Hawk surprised some with his Senate victory. But not much changes, actually. Tom replaces Dr. Roger Reitz, who was often seen strolling down the left side of the aisle. Hawk's victory wasn't a surprise here. I thought Tom would do very well in Manhattan due to his education credentials and past experience in the House. Plus, he's just a swell guy.

So folks, everything's not going to hell and hand-basket, as some would have you believe. In fact, the national scene is going to look as it has the past four years. And divided government is, generally, a good thing.

Locally, we chose to renew a sales tax for roads, property tax relief and economic development. Well, that's the same tax as we've had the past 10 years. Phillips and Carlin return to the House. Hawk replaces Reitz. But the seat switch to the Democrats probably doesn't affect policy choices all that much, if at all. And the Riley County Commission gets a tad more conservative and fiscally responsible, perhaps. We'll be watching for butterflies next Spring.

Changing Demographics? More Like Ignorance

By Arnold Ahlert
Jewish World Review

By now, you've heard from most of the chattering classes as to why Democrats in general, and Barack Obama in particular, did so well on election night. You've heard about changing demographics, an opportune storm, media malfeasance, etcetera, etcetera, ad nauseam.

Let me make it much simpler. On election night, for the umpteenth time, I went to the local food mart, and gave the high school kid working the register a five dollar bill for something that cost $2.32. She punched it into the computer, after which I gave her the thirty-two cents. By now, most of you know where this is going: the dazed look, alternating between the change and me, as if I'd handed her the Dead Sea Scrolls and demanded a translation on the spot. Of course if I'd used that analogy to make light of the moment, it wouldn't have mattered: these kids aren't just mathematically illiterate, they wouldn't know what the Dead Sea Scrolls are either--unless it was the name of a new app for their I-phones.

On the way home, I had the radio on. Without a trace of embarrassment or irony in his voice, the newscaster spoke about a mock vote taken at the local high school. "Barack Obama won in a landslide," he gushed. After two generations of leftist indoctrination by unionized educators, whose quid pro quo relationship with the Democrat party is written in stone, I don't doubt it for a minute. Nor was I particularly shocked earlier this year when I wrote about three kids in their late teens and early twenties, who couldn't place the date of the Civil War within the 50-year spread I gave them to do so. Literacy? If it can't be reduced to 140 characters for Twitter's sake, it no longer matters.

None of this is particularly new. In fact, when I taught reading and study skills in NYC schools thirty years ago, it was exactly the same. Those "kids" are now in their 40s. The only thing that semi-shocked me back then was the fact that most of them were no longer ashamed of being ignorant. In fact, many of them were proud of their cluelessness. Now, most of them barely know what shame is, other than having someone say something bad about them on FaceBook. And pride is all about owning the latest gadget, replacing the gadget that replaced the gadget before that.

There's your so-called demographic. We've become a nation with a majority of weak-thinkers, allied with those more than willing to do their thinking for them, as long as they get "free stuff" in return. What is the minority offering as an alternative? Freedom.

Unfortunately, freedom is hard. For one thing, it requires critical thinking skills. For another, it requires effort. Tyranny is easy. Just do whatever someone tells you to do, whether it's a bureaucrat--or a cash register. What was this election really all about? We are now certain that it is impossible to change the trajectory of nation comprised of millions of people who can't make change.

As a result, I have a suggestion for the Republicans, one they won't hear from anyone else: give Barry and Company everything they want, without an iota of resistance. Let 'em raise taxes and the debt ceiling, gut the military, and run up trillions of dollars of additional deficits and debt. Then stand back, and let an utterly corrupt media chronicle the demise--without being able to pin an ounce of the ensuing socialist catastrophe on an "obstructionist" GOP.

Harry Reid wants to end the filibuster? Tell him it won't be necessary. For the next four years, Republicans will do what a certain Senator from Illinois made a career of doing: they will simply vote "present" on every bill put before them in both houses of Congress. In effect, give Democrats they same unassailable majority they had in 2008--the same one that led directly to the passage of ObamaCare.

Radical? Compared to what? Watching a president get re-elected, despite four major scandals, the worst recovery on record, and the explosion of entitlements--all of which was blamed on the aforementioned Republican obstructionism? Being blamed for everything that will go wrong from 2012 to 2016, completely irrespective of reality or the truth?

It's time to get real: the only thing Republicans can do is delay the inevitable. Why bother? The sooner progressives and the media bring America to its knees, the sooner the people who know better can put the nation back on its feet.

I know what you're thinking. What about the hell we'll have to go through between now and then? A couple of answers.

First, it's time for the voting majority to get exactly what they voted for--in spades. Second, and this applies not just to America, but to every socialist country that has also run out of other people's money to spend: better an out and out meltdown and genuine recovery after two or three years, than the ongoing twilight of semi-misery we're currently enduring. Misery that could last a decade more--or longer.

Any attempt to meet Democrats "half-way" is a fool's errand. There is no split-the-difference, get along to go along, compromise that can be reached between tyranny and freedom. With respect to the rule of law and the Constitution, you're either in or you're out. A nation is either solvent or bankrupt. It is either exceptional or ordinary. The American majority voted for tyranny, bankruptcy and mediocrity.

Give the people what they want--until they can't stand it anymore.
